

Japan: Super Global High Schools

The Japanese Government's Super Global High School (SGH) project was launched in 2014, and aims "to develop leaders with international competencies". Working with universities, industry and international organisations, SGH schools develop and implement tailored curricula for five years.

SGH Associate schools will work with SGH schools to develop a broader SGH community. SGH Associate schools also develop and implement targeted educational programs for "nurturing global leaders" for one year.

Students from SGH schools will be "expected to hone their communication and problem-solving skills as they tackle global issues" in concert with Japan-based universities and international organisations, industry and non-profit groups.

The SGH project complements the government's focus on internationalisation of universities – where possible, connections between SGH schools and universities are noted below.
